Bibliographies, and other list-like compilations of references, are generally not considered citations because they do not fulfill the true spirit of the term: deliberate acknowledgement by other authors of the priority of one's ideas. Contents. 1 Concept. A full reference can be hidden, only displayed when wanted by the reader, in the form of a tooltip.[13] This style makes citing easier and improves the reader's experience. Citation-name system[edit]. Superscripted numbers are inserted at the point of reference, just as in the citation-sequence system, but the citations are numbered according to the order of cited works at the end of the paper or book; this list is often sorted alphabetically by author.
